Hostage Rescue Camp
Phillipi, West Virginia
incredible-adventures.com/urban-ops1.html

Vacationers who are more Bauer than beach bum need look no further than the West Virginia mountains. Incredible Adventures' three-day Urban Ops Adventure camp teaches those with a serious hero complex how to get the good guys out and leave the bad guys dead. Fighters leave with tactical skills—hands-on training in seven weapons systems including assault rifles, pistols and submachine guns, and the knowledge that they can rescue a fake hostage from a five-story training facility, located in a former hospital. Patrons must pass a criminal background check and pony up $3,695 to get in on the action.

BEST VACATIONS FOR GUYS

By Christina Couch

For the man who craves sweat, adrenaline and action, a resort vacation in an idyllic setting simply won't do. So we found the 10 best places to engage your id, whether it's driving a stunt car, hunting a wild animal or flying a fighter jet. Fair warning: These 10 adventure vacations aren't for the faint of heart, but they are the best ways to escape the boredom of the nine-to-five workday.

Spy Camp

Tucson, Arizona

incredible-adventures.com/covert1.html

Espionage, explosives and booby traps—they're all located on a hidden base in Arizona, just waiting for the next generation of James Bonds. Instead of blowing their vacation time at a Holiday Inn, spy campers get to ram barricades with high-speed vehicles, hone their pistol marksmanship, identify and disarm explosives, brush up on the latest in enemy surveillance technology and learn self-defense techniques from former Navy SEALs. The camp is three days, $3,795 and all the blood, sweat and tears you can muster.
