HIGH IN THE ROCKIES TACTICAL TRAINING CAMP

High In the Rockies Tactical Training Camp is an intensive, three day program which provides important tactical and operational skills, firearms training, defensive tactics and academic lectures on critical areas of survival in the current terrorist environment. While designed for military, law enforcement and professional security, it is an excellent opportunity for anyone to learn such skills as wilderness survival, tracking, improvised weapons, knife fighting and throwing, self defense, and shooting. Each of the courses in this program offers the best techniques to be found from special forces training around the world. Instructors are actual special forces veterans and instructors, including training from such units as U.S. Army Special Forces, Russian Spetsnaz, British SAS.

Held at the 800 acre Beaver Ranch, outside Conifer, Colorado, the Camp offers a scenic wilderness training experience, with indoor sleeping, eating and lecture facilities. As weather is unpredictable in the high country, be prepared for anything. Training will take place, rain or shine or snow. Still, accommodations are rugged. Warm clothes, wet weather gear, boots and sleeping bags are a must. Everyone must also have a complete, camouflage BDU uniform, handgun of your choice (for those coming from out of state handguns can be provided) and 200 rounds of ammunition. Three meals a day are provided, though snack food is recommended for other times. Pack as though going on a camping trip.
