

Tiger Shark Outreach

When you cage dive with tiger sharks, you'll be in the very capable hands of Jillian Morris. Jillian is a certified dive instructor who loves sharks and loves to share her knowledge of them with others. (Her car license plate reads SHRKGRL.) She has a degree in Behavioral Biology from the University of New England and interned at the prestigious Mote Marine Lab Center for Shark Research. Jillian's worked with great white sharks in the Farallons, lemon sharks in Marquesas and nurse sharks in the Dry Tortugas. She spent five months at Shark Bay in Western Australia studying tiger sharks and marine turtles. When she's not in the Bahamas, the woman Sport Diver Magazine called "the Britney Spears of shark diving" can be found leading dive trips for California's H2O Photo Pros.

Our incredible tiger shark adventures are offered in cooperation with Ocean Outreach, a non-profit organization dedicated to protecting and preserving marine life.

Sample Itinerary

Day One : Friday

Arrive in Freeport, Bahamas. Take the resort's shuttle to Old Bahama Bay. Check into your oceanfront room. Relax and enjoy the resort's many amenities and activities.

Day Two : Saturday

We'll leave the dock bright and early for Tiger Beach. Travel time to the site is about two hours. Warm, shallow, clear waters and very big sharks make "Tiger Beach" a favorite spot of underwater photographers. We conduct our dives in a custom-built shark cage designed with photographers in mind. Diving without a cage is just not a good idea. Tiger sharks aren't picky about what they eat and will just as happily chow down on you as a sea turtle. (That's why you actually have a better chance of surviving a great white shark attack than a tiger shark attack. Great whites spit you out while tiger sharks chew you up.)

We supply a "hookah style" air supply system, so you don't need to be a certified diver. By eliminating the need for tanks, we make it easier for you to move about the cage and take pictures. We'll get back to the marina late in the afternoon. Enjoy a relaxing evening at the resort.

Day Three: Sunday

This day is all yours, to spend as you wish... unless weather prevents you from diving on Saturday. In that case, this is your all-important back-up day. If you are blessed with perfect weather, this is a day you could choose to spend sailing, bonefishing, swimming in the resort's pool or exploring the village of West End.

Day Four: Monday

Depart for home.
