Some guys collect baseball cards.
Some collect coins.
Other guys collect wines, classic cars or stamps.
We're happy one guy decided to be different.
He's collected some of the most impressive heavy metal jets in the world.

Since a dozen or so fighters wouldn't fit in his garage, he built Thunder City, a first-class, fully-operational aviation restoration facility. Thunder City is located at the edge of Cape Town International Airport and is home to the world's largest privately owned collection of heavy metal ex-military jet aircraft.

Thunder City is also the home of National Test Pilot School South Africa, an affiliate of the well-known National Test Pilot School based in Mojave, California. Test pilots and flight engineers from around the world travel to South Africa to train in these incredible Cape Town Jets.

Cape Town is one of the world's most beautiful cities.

Cape Town offers incredible flying adventures surrounded by amazing scenery. Go vertical in the Lightning. Fly low in the Buccaneer. Perform aerobatics in the Hawker Hunter. Do it all while flying through the mountains or along the coastline.

You don't have to be a pilot to fly a Cape Town Jet. The Lightning and Hawker feature dual controls and side-by-side seating. In the Buccaneer, the seating is tandem and only the pilot has controls. You'll be actively involved in the flight playing the role of navigator.
