Day 4

Escorted to airport for departure from Moscow. **

 Note: Moscow is such a great city, we suggest you spend no less than four days/three nights in Russia.*

GENERAL INFORMATION

To fly in the MiG-25, you must meet certain height, weight and health requirements.

The MiG-25 is designed to fly very high and very fast. It will perform simple, low-G maneuvers, but was not made to perform complex aerobatics. If you'd like to fly to the edge of space, and perform airshow-type aerobatics, we suggest you add an L-39 jet trainer flight or MiG-29 flight to your adventure.

One of the pilots to break the altitude record in the two-seat MiG-25 was Alexandre Garnaev. "Sasha" Garnaev is one of our pilots in Moscow.

SPACE ADVENTURES

INCREDIBLE SPACE ADVENTURES

ZERO-GRAVITY

A limited number of flights in the Russian Space Program's Illyushin-76 MDK zero-gravity airplane are available. Be prepared to fly and float about the cabin as your instructors help you perform floating maneuvers including rolls, spins and somersaults.

COSMONAUT TRAINING

Spend a full day in Star City at the Yuri Gagarin Cosmonaut Training Center using the same simulators used by cosmonauts to prepare for space travel. Standard package includes the MIR Simulator, Soyuz-TM Simulator, Navigation Simulator, Vestibular Training and a detailed tour of Hydrolab and Centrifuge. Tours and training sessions at Star City are available separately or in conjunction with any Incredible Adventures program.

HYDROLAB TRAINING

Suit up in an Orlan Space suit for a work session in the same Hydrolab underwater facility used to prepare cosmonauts for space walks. Open to certified divers only.

EDGE OF SPACE

Climb to the edge of space in the MiG-25 "Foxbat". You'll rocket at more than 2.5 times the speed of sound to an altitude of more than 75,000 feet high. There, you'll confirm the earth is round and see a sky that's black above and blue below.

VOYAGE INTO SPACE

Incredible Adventures invites you to take part in the first commercial flights to the edge of the universe in a vehicle designed expressly for space tourism.

You will see the spectacular glow of the Earth's curvature and experience weightlessness as you travel to the ultimate destination: astronaut altitude, 100 kilometers above sea level.

The space voyage program includes space training, final countdown preparations, the space flight and a gala dinner where you will be awarded your astronaut wings and a space traveler certificate. Call for complete details.
